"There has been a quiet and generally uninteresting market on contracts during the entire day. Values market on contracts during the entire day. Values have averaged lower than at the close on Saturday, but were not under very decided depression, as there still appears to be some demand, with probably a slight additional stimulus obtained on the steadler tenor of the Liverpool sduices, which crested a desire among the timid to protect themselves. At the best, how-ver, business was quite moderate, and brokers were compilating of an absence of orders on both sides of the question. The comparatively low ruling price, evidently, still gands in the way of further 'short' sales, and there.
